

It's Only Over If We Say It Is

Hold on—

To your mindset, it determines the future of the world: If you think you will fail, you will, so retaliate, rage against parasite (negative thoughts construct stone bars around perseverance, closing in) retaliate,
rage against plastic plague, paralyzing pesticides, oil guttled from Earth's veins (her fuel Is running low) and glow electric resilience.

The planet is an oven,
humans set the heat
too high, burning
browning
so much

extinction, it's the end of the world as we know it, as we know it.

Burst down stone walls humanity is ripe for change we have never been closer to utopia, euphoria than we are now.

Change is inevitable guaranteed: we were never meant to live in stasis.
We forgot we're not in control.
Mother Nature

is, we must play by her rules, adapt, rediscover harmony.

Climate change is a warning forcing us to look inwards, we don't like what we see, we just have to rewrite the script
look downside up
change our minds—overcome and

tomorrow is sparkling in shades of green, amber, cotton candy blue, rejuvenating breath
so many singing birds butterflies
bees
